

THIS MORNING'S NEWS.

In New York Government bonds are quoted at 123 1/2 for 4s and 107 1/4 for 10s, 101 1/2 for 5s; sterling, 84 3/4 for 10s, 100 for 5s, 100 for 10s; silver, 110 1/2.

Silver in London, 50 1/2; consols, 101 1/2; 5 per cent. United States bonds, 100 1/2; 10s, 101 1/2; 5s, 101 1/2.

In San Francisco Mexican dollars are quoted at 50 1/2 cents.

Mining stocks opened moderately active in San Francisco yesterday. The Bodie assessment of 50 cents per share went on, and the stock opened at $14 1/2, but subsequently fell to $13, closing at $12 3/4. Mono was carried along with Bodie, opening at $2 1/2, advancing to $2 3/4, and closing at $2 1/2. There was considerable business in Nevada at better prices, say $2 1/2 to $3. The stocks were generally well sustained, though showing no particular advance.

In Fresno county, Philip Jones shot and wounded William and John Brint—the former mortally. Mrs. Lindwall waited for a wage of $3,000 from Los Angeles to Tompkins, A. T., and won it.

In a railroad accident near Macon, Mo., yesterday, a sleeping car and two coaches were wrecked and six passengers badly hurt.

Two fire occurred in New York City yesterday. Lushy's Music Hall, in London, was destroyed by fire Sunday night.

The Ozar and Ostrina appeared in public at St. Petersburg Sunday night.

Muniova wants her boundary extended to Had son's Bay.

Recruits for the Egyptian army have to be driven by cavalry to the front.

Tammany men have been chosen President and Clerk of the New York Board of Aldermen.

A testimonial subscription is proposed in honor of the late President Grant.

Several buildings were demolished in Macon, N. Y., Saturday, by a gas explosion.

France will not recognize negotiations with China until all her objects in Tonkin are achieved.

A meeting of Nationalists was held Sunday in the yard of the Catholic church, Dublin.

Albert Stultz died in San Jose yesterday from the effects of a fall from a ladder.

The stage from Wickenburg for Prescott was robbed near the latter place Sunday evening.

Gu Miller, a well-known German of Portland, Ore., was found dead in bed at that place yesterday morning.

Two highwaymen robbed a stage near Grants, Pa., Ore., yesterday, taking the express box, but not disturbing the mail and passengers.

By the loss of a fishing schooner off the Massachusetts coast, fourteen men were drowned.

Fire destroyed the American Exchange Hotel in Antioch yesterday morning, two men—John Griffin and Thomas Hines—perishing in the flames.

Fire near Walls, W. T.

J. K. McDonald was drowned Sunday in the Chehalis river, W. T.

It is expected at Portland that ice will close the upper Columbia river within the next thirty hours. Two men were drowned Sunday night at Langley, B. C.

A Chinaman was murdered in the street at Victoria, B. C., Sunday night.

Five female members of the Salvation Army were arrested yesterday in Bridgeport, Conn., for parading the streets.

The unidentified bodies recovered from the City of Columbus disaster are to be taken to Boston and deposited in the morgue.

It is now said that the women, crushed at Orono, Col., last week, were soon to become a mother.

In a fight between two gamblers at Orono, Col., one was instantly killed and the other mortally wounded.

In the trial of James Nutt at Pittsburg, the case went to the jury last evening.

A BRUISER EXHIBITION.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

To-night an exhibition by a parcel of bruisers, or so-called pugilists, is to be given in this city. It ought not to be, but it is probable that there is no law to prevent it, where there should be. These pugilistic exhibitions are demoralizing, contribute nothing to the public good, do not augment the sum of human happiness, and are representative of the brutal element, which will be present in force to-night as it is to be the surface on all such occasions. It is said in defense of these disgusting shows, one or more of which we have witnessed sufficiently to analyze them, that they are not harmful because no actual personal violence is accomplished, no gloves being used. This is mere pretense, for the men who exhibit themselves do so as bruisers, and the curiosity to see them is aroused by the announcement that they have been bruised, battered, maimed and wounded their fellow-men in the prize ring. They cannot lay any claim to the chivalry; the skill they represent is not that which is used for men's good, to defend the right or redress wrong. On the contrary it is more likely to be acquired by the evil-doer, more likely to be used by the cowardly, the ruthless and the cut-throat. It is no defense of these exhibitions whatever that the art of self-defense is a manly art. It is manly; it is an accomplishment to be able to "take care of one's self," to know how to guard one's body from the blows of an adversary; but such exhibitions as these do not teach the art of self-defense.

PRIZE FIGHT, TO WHICH THEY PAVE THE WAY FOR THE UNPROFESSIONAL LOOKER-ON.

THE RIGHT TO TRADE FREELY.

"There is no certainty," say the dispatches, "that the Mexican reciprocity treaty has been finally defeated. An extension of time has been secured, and we have until July 20th in which to debate the matter." It is added that there was but one vote lacking to confirm the convention, the opponents of the treaty having just one more than one-third of the Senate. The free traders of the South defeated the measure, and thus contradicted their own doctrines and stultified their position as to the tariff. Poor selfishness worked the defeat. Thus it is stated by the correspondents that "Louisiana wants free trade for everything but sugar, North Carolina on everything but rice, Virginia and a few other States on everything but tobacco, Ohio on everything but wool, and the States further west on everything and the States further east on everything." The high protectionists in the Senate voted against the treaty because it tends toward free trade, and the free traders because it was aimed at raw material produced in their special localities. "This is a very humiliating showing, for it is equivalent to a statement that the best good of the whole people was not the acting principle. The extreme protectionists, we think, 'overshot the mark,' for in seeking to protect a free trade, by opposing Mexican reciprocity, they on an export duty, for the treaty proposed but a means to an end, and that end is to stimulate and encourage our exports. When, therefore, the protectionists declare that reciprocity injures home industries, they literally say that they shall not be free export, in order that protected industries may tax the people. For, if we secure free export by admitting the country with which we hold a convention to a like privilege, we foster the scheme of the Constitution. That instrument forbids the levy of taxes on articles of export, and non-reciprocity in fact compels us to lose on our exports amounting to an export tax. Says Perry, in his recent admirable work on political economy: 'The Constitution limits the power of Congress to tax the people to the sole purpose of getting money; by which we are to understand that it is to get money for the whole United States, not lay taxes to enable a few to get money from the many or the many from the few. So the conclusion is reached logically that a tax on foreign goods which prevents us from getting money by reason of a high rate, raises the price of the domestic product, and being thus a direct act of taxation, is unjust and unconstitutional. Whether, in his celebrated speech against Hayne, it will be remembered, declared that 'the authority of Congress to exercise revenue power with direct reference to the protection of manufactures, is a questionable authority.' With a vast surplus revenue, it is all the more questionable whether a tax can be levied on one class to protect another, because the getting of the money is not for the end contemplated by the scheme of our Government, to wit, the support of the Government. The imposition of heavy duties on Mexican imports practically lays an export duty on our trade with that country. What then shall we say to those who oppose reciprocity? Simply that you are levying indirectly upon the people an export tax, since, as we have said, our trade, excepting reciprocity, cannot have free export, as contemplated by the Constitution. To the inducement of non-reciprocity and the bar to trade, the country will not long submit and the present defeat will not be final.

MOUNTAIN POPULATION.

The Placer Herald says: "If Sacramento should begin to retrograde, and building should stop entirely, would the RECORD UNION advise all the carpenters of that city to at once possess themselves of land and go to farming? If it did so, how many carpenters does it suppose would follow its advice? We certainly should, and deem it most excellent advice. The one thing every man should do who can do it, is to possess something of God's foot-stool, subdue it and make it yield to his tilling. As to the acceptance of advice, that is another thing. The Herald adds: 'If, instead of houses, there were still bridges or fences to build, that being the carpenter's line, he would, no doubt, stay and build them; otherwise he would emigrate to some locality where his particular services were in demand.' Precisely. Our contemporary can force no issue upon us as to that. So we say, if hydraulic mines can be worked by some unobjectionable process, they should be so mined. If they cannot, the best thing to do is to make all due efforts to force the soil to yield a living to its occupants. If this is not possible, then of course the example of the carpenters or our contemporary cities must be followed—for we have no idea that the miners proposed to stolidly mourn for the past and starve. Our contemporary continues: 'The soil on the western slope of the Sierras, at an altitude corresponding with the location of most of the hydraulic mines, is tolerably fertile, and very well adapted to the production of potatoes, vegetables and the earlier fruits, such as apples, pears and cherries. A few of the present population, more particularly those who have, at some time in their lives, had experience in this kind of industry, may resort to cultivation of the soil for a livelihood; but to expect every miner to do so, regardless of experience and regardless of inclination, is not reasonable.' We have heard no such expectation. It has not been the question of 'What shall the miners do?' so much as 'What development of the mining region is possible?' The hard-ship visited upon the miners no one realizes more fully than we, and no one extends more sincere sympathy; but it will not buy them the necessities of life or give them a competency.

THE HERALD ALSO SAYS: "We have entertained the belief and the hope that some time in the future these Sierra slopes, at an altitude of from 3,000 to 4,000 feet, will be covered with orchards and gardens, varying in the character of the product according to the altitude, and dotted with neat and comfortable and attractive homes. But to expect men who have followed in most instances grown old in the service, to work out this change would be expecting too much." This is probably true; but what will the Herald propose? If it requires a new population and a long time to develop the possibilities of the mountain region, let us all bend our energies to inducing the immigration of the one and the shortening of the other.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

The Court of Appeals. The Court of Appeals, sitting at Spokane Falls, January 21st.—The Court

PACIFIC SLOPE.

At Spokane Falls, January 21st.—The Court of Appeals, sitting at Spokane Falls, January 21st.—The Court

CALIFORNIA.

Consular Certificates. San Francisco, January 21st.—Colonel Bee was put on the witness stand to testify regarding the issue of consular certificates to Chinamen, by means of which they effected a landing on their return here. The Colonel testified that in issuing such certificates, or passports, as he preferred to call them, every Chinaman had to be taken to the consular office, and there he had to be examined by the applicant, and measures taken to fix his identity. The Court expressed a wish that Colonel Bee would impart to the consular office, in connection with the consular certificates, a history of the consular certificates at considerable length, the latter showing that joint consular and Customs certificates had been used to accommodate Colonel Bee.

JUDGE TYLER ARRESTED.

San Francisco, January 21st.—Geo. W. Tyler, fined $500 recently by Superior Judge Foster for sending a scandalous communication to the Grand Jury, was placed under arrest this morning by Sheriff Conolly. The arrest on Saturday received orders authorizing this action, and the arrest was effected by Sheriff Conolly.

HUNG MAN FOUND DEAD—WHEELER, THE STRANGER.

San Francisco, January 21st.—H. E. Brown, formerly employed in a liquor house, was found dead in the City Cemetery, with a bullet hole in his head. He left a wife and three children. The cause of death was not ascertained.

POLITICIANS IN THEIR MUSCLE.

STOCKTON, January 21st.—This afternoon the Court of Appeals, sitting at Stockton, California, January 21st.—The Court

HOTEL DESTROYED AND TWO MEN BURNED TO DEATH.

ANTIOCH (Calif.), January 21st.—A fire broke out in the American Exchange Hotel, a two-story brick building, which was entirely consumed. Most of the inmates escaped in their night-dresses, and from windows by ladders and ropes. Two men were known to have perished—John Griffin, 25 years of age, a son of the proprietor, and Thomas Hines, 35 years of age, a son of the proprietor. The cause of the fire was not ascertained.

FATAL RESULT OF A FALL.

San Jose, January 21st.—Albert Stultz, aged 39, a native of New Jersey, died last night from the effects of injuries received by a fall from a ladder. He was working on the roof of a building when he fell.

RESULT OF JUDGE SAWYER'S DECISION.

NAVADA, January 21st.—The large number of hydraulic mines and the hydraulic mining operations in that State, have been the subject of much discussion. The result of Judge Sawyer's decision is awaited with interest.

SHE WON HER BET.

BENSON, January 21st.—Mrs. Lindwall, who started from Los Angeles to Tompkins, Ariz., on foot on a wagon of 23,000 lbs, has arrived here, bringing 25 days on the road and having three bags of money to spare to make the balance of 28 miles.

ANOTHER STAGE ROBBERY—ALLEGED HIGHWAYMAN CAPTURED.

PASADENA, January 21st.—The stage from Wickenburg was stopped and robbed by highwaymen last evening about three miles from town. The mail bags were cut open and the letters rifled. Officers are in pursuit.

THE UPPER COLUMBIA—LIQUOR-DEALERS JUDICIAUALLY SUBDUED.

PORTLAND, January 21st.—The indications are that the liquor-dealers in this city will be the next victims of the law. It is thought that the next move will be to make a raid on the liquor-dealers, and to subdue them.

CHARITY BALL NOTICE.

THE GENERAL COMMITTEE HAS IN PREPARATION a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every such society is urged to prepare a programme of musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, as a portion of the evening's entertainment. Owing to the short time given for preparation, the committee feel it impossible to communicate personally with all who are willing to participate. They, therefore, extend this general invitation to every organized society to contribute its share in the programme. Every

TUESDAY, JANUARY 22, 1924

DAILY WEATHER REPORT.

UNITED STATES SIGNAL OFFICE
SACRAMENTO, JANUARY 21, 1924—8:30 P. M.

Place of observation.	Barom.	Ther.	Wind.	Clouds.	Remarks.
Tacoma, Wash.	30.50	40	E 14	Clear
Olympia, Wash.	30.40	40	E 14	Clear
Portland, Ore.	30.40	40	E 14	Clear
Fort Canby, Ore.	30.40	40	E 14	Clear
Seattle, Wash.	30.40	40	E 14	Clear
Spokane, Wash.	30.40	40	E 14	Clear
Bozeman, Mont.	30.40	40	E 14	Clear
Butte, Mont.	30.40	40	E 14	Clear
Salt Lake City, Utah	30.40	40	E 14	Clear
San Francisco, Cal.	30.40	40	E 14	Clear
Los Angeles, Cal.	30.40	40	E 14	Clear
San Diego, Cal.	30.40	40	E 14	Clear
Maximum temperature, 55.4; minimum, 34.9.
River, feet—fall of 2 inches in 24 hours.
Forecast for January 22, 1924.
Clear, with a few clouds in the afternoon.
Severe, S. S. C. A. S. S. A.

Weather Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, January 21.—Indications for California: Fair, with light clouds; local rains.

ADVERTISEMENT MENTION.

Sacramento Tivoli—Chimes of Normandy?—tonight.

Congregational Church—Torch concert.

Metropolitan Theater—Tonight, John L. Sullivan.

No. 1—Columbus and Confidence Lovers.

Lost—Motor car.

Charity Ball—Tonight.

Widow's situation—housekeeper.

Strayed—A small brown mare.

Mentioned—A young married man.

Situation wanted by a young girl.

Hotel business for sale or lease.

John Clark wants a reliable correspondent.

Gas Company—Annual meeting February 11.

Diamond Seal—Lost.

Sabbath School Convention—tomorrow.

Occidental School—tonight.

Auctions.

Shelburne & Smith—To-day, Fisher's restaurant.

Bell & Co.—Wednesday, furniture, etc.

Bell & Co.—Real estate, January 25th.

Business Advertisements.

Mechanics' Store—Christy's London Hats.

Tivoli—Furniture and Jewels.

Tivoli—Furniture and Jewels.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

The Board of City Trustees met at the new

City Hall at 10 a. m., yesterday, all the members present.

The engineer of the Water Works reported that during the week the machinery had been in operation 144 hours and 9,817,000 gallons of water pumped.

A petition signed by a majority of the Chinese merchants on I street was presented,

asking that they be allowed to discharge firecrackers within the city limits during the

New Year celebration, which begins on the 9th of January and lasts until the 5th of February. As soon as the petition was read,

Trustee Nielsen expressed his opposition to the petition, stating that the Chinese who presented the petition asked if the Board would not allow them to discharge fireworks at night. The Board refused to give their consent to their letting discharge at any time or places. They informed the Chinese that there was, no doubt, plenty of places outside of the city limits where the Chinese could go on without disturbing the rest of anyone,

causing confusion or frightening teams

into runaways.

THREE IN THE CENTRIES.

The following communication was read:

SACRAMENTO, January 21, 1924.

To the Honorable Board of Trustees of the City of Sacramento: For the last two years the City of Sacramento has been cutting down trees

in the avenues and walks around the city hall and in the city limits. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

trees, whose shade and beauty have been

a great asset to the city. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

trees, whose shade and beauty have been

a great asset to the city. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

trees, whose shade and beauty have been

a great asset to the city. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

trees, whose shade and beauty have been

a great asset to the city. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

trees, whose shade and beauty have been

a great asset to the city. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

trees, whose shade and beauty have been

a great asset to the city. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

trees, whose shade and beauty have been

a great asset to the city. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

trees, whose shade and beauty have been

a great asset to the city. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

trees, whose shade and beauty have been

a great asset to the city. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

trees, whose shade and beauty have been

a great asset to the city. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

trees, whose shade and beauty have been

a great asset to the city. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

trees, whose shade and beauty have been

a great asset to the city. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

trees, whose shade and beauty have been

a great asset to the city. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

trees, whose shade and beauty have been

a great asset to the city. I am writing you to

draw your attention to the fact that this is

the last of the beautiful, sturdy and vigorous

BRIEF NOTES.

Two carloads of immigrants arrived from the East last night.

L. L. Lewis promises, at 1623 H street,

were robbed of thirteen chickens Sunday night.

Cynthia Herrington was yesterday in the Superior Court granted a divorce from M. J.

Herrington.

The report of the Horticultural Commissioners will be issued from the State Printing

Office in a day or two.

The day upon which the cases of Hurtado and Ratin are to be argued before the United States Supreme Court.

The annual meeting of the Capital Gas

Company, which is to have been held yesterday, was postponed until February 11.

Phoenix Lodge, I. O. O. F. of Galt, installed their newly-elected officers Saturday evening. A banquet was given at the installation.

A meeting of the Directors of the State

Agricultural Society will be held at 2 p. m.

to-day, to accept the new Exposition building.

Marco Mania is improving the appearance of his building on the southwest corner of Third and J streets by the application of a new coat of mastic.

The license case will come up for hearing

in the Superior Court this morning—before

Judge Armstrong, if Judge McFarland is not well enough to preside.

A gentleman who came down from Shasta

yesterday says that the almond trees in that section are in full bloom, and that all nature

has begun a new year of life.

A carload of blooded cattle and a lot of fine sheep, from Australia, belonging to Cat-

terson & Sisson, passed through the city yesterday, en route to the fair grounds.

Miss Ida Miller, teacher of the seventh-grade school at Tenth and P streets, had her purse, containing $80, stolen from her schoolroom during her momentary absence yesterday evening.

E. A. Boyer, contractor, is building a three-story and basement addition to the Columbian Brewery to be built on the corner of Tenth and P streets. It is in dimensions 24 by 34 feet.

Dupty Shaffer, M. A. Wilson, of San Francisco, brought up last night Bartlett

Finn and John Carrigan, who are bound for Folsom to serve three years each for burglary in the second degree.

The water will be shut off from the Second street main from the alley between J and K

streets, at 10 o'clock this morning.

It is refreshing to notice that the Sacramento Zoo has at last come to the conclusion that California is not a land of fire.

In their last issue it was stated, preceded with a good-sized M.

George H. Mallor, who was brought back from Baltimore by doctor Thackeray, was taken on a charge of stage robbery, was sent to Downsville yesterday by Sheriff

Nash, of Contra Costa county, who had come down after him.

In Justice Buckingham's Court, Washington, yesterday, Oscar Hanson, Eugene

Kirk, William Kirk, Bert Lashley and Jesse

Dolan pleaded guilty to the charge of assault and battery. They will receive their sentences on Monday.

A team attached to a wagon loaded with wood, the team belonging to the woodyard

at Sixth and H streets, entered upon a runaway in the city streets, and, after a chase, knocked down some awning

poles at Twelfth and I streets.

About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon an inhabitant of the city was driving his horse, got too strong a hold upon one line, ran the horse around a sharply

curved street, and, in the process, ran over a horse, which was being driven by the General Committee for the charity ball, which has been organized for the benefit of the city's poor. The horse was killed, and the driver of the horse was injured. The driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

was injured, and the driver of the horse

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

The 1st. Galette Club's last-year party at Armory Hall last night was a brilliant affair,

and one of the most successful ever held by the club. The affair was given by the club, and was a most successful one.

The affair was given by the club, and

was a most successful one. The affair

was given by the club, and was a most successful one. The affair was given by

the club, and was a most successful one.

The affair was given by the club, and

was a most successful one. The affair

was given by the club, and was a most

successful one. The affair was given by

the club, and was a most successful one.

The affair was given by the club, and

was a most successful one. The affair

was given by the club, and was a most

successful one. The affair was given by

the club, and was a most successful one.

The affair was given by the club, and

was a most successful one. The affair

was given by the club, and was a most

successful one. The affair was given by

the club, and was a most successful one.

The affair was given by the club, and

was a most successful one. The affair

was given by the club, and was a most

successful one. The affair was given by

the club, and was a most successful one.

The affair was given by the club, and

was a most successful one. The affair

was given by the club, and was a most

successful one. The affair was given by

the club, and was a most successful one.

The affair was given by the club, and

was a most successful one. The affair

was given by the club, and was a most

successful one. The affair was given by

the club, and was a most successful one.

The affair was given by the club, and

was a most successful one. The affair

was given by the club, and was a most

successful one. The affair was given by

the club, and was a most successful one.

The affair was given by the club, and

